MARCH OF THE 7TH REGIMENT TO WASH-INGTON .- The seventh Regiment of New York, and part of the Twelfth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers, took up the line of March from Annapolis between 6 and 7 o'clock on Wendesday morning, and arrived at the Junction about 8 o'clock yesterday. The column kept the railroad track, and marched all Wednesday night, with two brass cannon in the van, and pickets and skirmishers out. They marched quietly, without drum, and the country people were not aware of their night passage, although they flocked along the road during the day

The troops halted, and kindling fires, break-fasted in the woods of Columbus Jacobs, esq., throwing themselves on their blankets on the ground. The fires were kindled with the fencing on the place, but all destroyed was paid for. The troops after breakfast formed and marched up to King's woods, at the Junction, and planting their guards and pickets, laid themselves down to catch some repose after their fatiguing march. The two taverns at the Junction did a thriving business while the liquor lasted, the soldiers imbibing freely. Fifty cents a dozen were paid for eggs, and other articles of food sold in proportoin. The soldiers' rations was biscuit. The residents of the place mingled with the soldiers, and conversed freely with them regarding their mis-

Their only present object was to defend the capital, and ultimately to reunite the country. The members of the seventh regiment especially were very fair in their political discrimination, and expressed their contempt for the preaching and doctrine of the northern fanatics. They were sadly deficient in news concerning the great events going on in the country, and read with avidity several copies of the "San Extra," which found their way into the camp.

About ten o'clock yesterday morning the train seized at the Washington depot came out from Washington in charge of Conductor Collins, guarded by about 100 soldiers. The regiments got aboard and left for Washington about eleven o'clock, where they arrived about noon. Much enthusiasm attended their arrival. About 4 P. M. the train returned in charge of Conductor Duvall, Collins being sick, and conveyed the Massachusetts regiment into Washington.

A train of burden cars, in charge of Conductor Fairbanks, was taken possession of as Clerk. The pastoral relation that had Junction to Washington is a military road | quest. in its strictest sense. The Winchester Republican thus notices the operations at Harper's Ferry :- "The armorers were not alowed to go to work Thursday, and the whole day was devoted to hauling powder from the magazine and distributing it through the public buildings, and in other arragements to destroy the public property. Fortunately the loss was small. The Virginia troops, numbering about seven thousand, have taken possession of the United States property, and are boxing up the machinery, of which there is a vast quantity, of great value, and sending it to Winchester, to be taken probably hereafter to Richmond, where the State is erecting an armory on an extensive scale. Harper's Ferry will no longer be continued as a place for the manufacture of arms. About 25,000 of the best and most approved arms in the country were saved, 5.000 of them ready for use have been distributed amongst the troops, and the rest, 20,000, nearly complet ed, are in the hands of skillful workmen, who will in few days have them completed. THE RESIGNATION of Mr. Anthony Me-Lean, of this place, in the Treasury Department, was determined upon as soon as the news of the secession of his native State reached Alexandria; but, in his peculiar and very responsible position, it could not be carried into effect, without the examination mentioned in the letter copied belowwhich letter has been put into our hands. Mr. McLean informs us, that no oath of any description whatever, has been tendered to him to sustain or detend the present administration at Washington:

TREASURY OF THE UNITED STATES, Washington, April 25, 1861. DEAR SIR: I had hoped that upon mature r lection you would reconsider your action, as in dicated in your letter to me of the 22d inst., and that you would remain in the position of Cash Herk in this office, which you have occupied so ong, and in which the reputation you have earned or yourself has been fully justified and confirmed by your correct deportment since I have had the leasure of being officially associated with you. The investigation that has proved the correctness of the count of the money, with the balance called for by the books, as made last evening by ourselves and friends, was not necessary to satisfy me, or those who know you, but was miade, as on know, at your urgent request.

Reciprocating all the kindly feelings expressed you toward me personally, I part with you th great regret, and while deploring what I onsider your mistaken views of duty, I shall alvays cherish for you the highest respect for your To ANTHONY McLEAN, esq.

Two guns were discharged at him, and innumerable quantities of stones and other missiles, hurled by the large excited crowd, pelted him from all sides, but without any apparent effect, until a stone struck him in the right place and felled him. As he was not yet dead, the contents of another gun were put in his head; this had the effect of starting him up again, when he was mercilessly beaten over the head and legs with a heavy stick and given another shot. Being still alive, though somewhat exhausted, he leaned against a house for some minutes, until the fifth load from a gun ended his lengthy struggle for life.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION .- By a notice from Bishop Meade, published in yesterday's Gasette, it will have been seen that the Virgina Episcopal Convention which was to have met in this city, will hold its sessions in Richmond, and not here. If the removal was made for peace and quiet, we doubt whether going from Alexandria to Richmond, "will better the matter" in the least. However, it is not for us to interfere. A gentleman of Washington, who left Philadelphia on Monday, reached here on Thursday evening, via Annapolis and Charles County. He reports the whole populace of Philadelphia as exasperated, since the surrender of Fort Sumter, and more especially since the refusal of the Baltimore authorities to allow the passage through that city of Northern troops.

At Perryville, there were several thousand troops collected, who are transported as rapidly as possible to Annapolis, under charge of Captain Stedmen, U. S. N. Arriving in Annapolis, our informant be gan to feel at home, although the city was in possession of the government troops. He reports the 71st New York Regiment as a splendid corps, far superior in appearance, and size of men, to the 7th, which is composed chiefly of very young men.

Much indignation is expressed in view of the neglect of Governor Hicks to provide the State with suitable arms. The sum of $75,-000 appropriated last year, is reported to have been expended in the purchase of condemned muskets. Gov. II. was regarded with suspicion at Annapolis, and slept every night in the Naval Academy.

Our informant left Annapolis on foot, in company with Cadet Morris of the Naval Academy, a grandson of the late Commodore Morris.
